It's a brave new world

Pretty much every small business owner would agree... marketing and advertising have changed dramatically in the past 5 years. An attractive website alone isn't enough – it has to be mobile-friendly, secure, and designed to be the center of your online marketing. Plus, you have to be on social – Facebook and more. You need paid search and display ads.

And don't forget about online listings and customer reviews.

How do you keep up?

That's a good question, but really, the more important question today is... how do you make all those parts work together?

Let's look at one small business owner's story...

Small business spotlight:

Introducing Joe

Joe owns Airmanor, Heating and Air Conditioning, a small business just like yours. He struggled to keep up with the changing technology. He was bringing in fewer new customers... losing out to his competition online.

See if Joe's challenges sound familiar...

Joe's challenges

A SMALL BUSINESS STRUGGLING TO KEEP UP WITH DIGITAL MARKETING

Incorrect information online

Joe claimed his Google listing... but he kept seeing incorrect information about his business online. He had no idea how to correct it.

Negative reviews

Joe's been told he has some bad reviews online ...but he doesn't know what to do about them – or how to get more positive reviews.

Out-of-date website

Joe's website is over three years old and hasn't been touched in at least two years. It's not bringing in any leads and falling farther down the search results.

Joe's challenges

A SMALL BUSINESS STRUGGLING TO KEEP UP WITH DIGITAL MARKETING

Competitors' ads everywhere

Joe's really annoyed that his top competitor has ads online that keep popping up on all of Joe's favorite websites.

Ad campaign too costly, no leads

Joe tried using paid search ads, but he burned through a month's budget in just a few days... and it wasn't getting him many leads!

Lacking necessary expertise

Overall, Joe's frustrated because he simply doesn't know where or how to start to solving his digital marketing challenges.

Joe's BIGGEST challenge

THE BIGGEST DIGITAL MARKETING CHALLENGE TODAY

Nothing is in sync

Joe's biggest challenge was one he hadn't even considered... the fact that his digital marketing was separate, disconnected pieces. Rather than have a single, interconnected marketing solution working in sync... Joe had a series of disjointed components.

Even if he finds a way to solve his other challenges, he'll never maximize his results if he doesn't get all his different marketing working together to put his brand and business message in front of his potential customers as they go through the buying journey.

Today's consumer journey includes three very clear steps ...Search, Discover and Engage.

When someone is shopping for a product or service today they go through three simple steps...

They SEARCH for information about what they need

They DISCOVER their options

They reach out and ENGAGE with the business that best meets their needs

Today's customer journey

As your customers search, discover and engage, their journey can include a dozen steps or more – search engines, social media pages, ads, websites, review pages and more.

You might think that a “search” always starts with a search engine, like Google, Yahoo! Or Bing – but a user's search for information could just as easily start when they click on an ad, or see a post (paid or personal) on Facebook. Maybe it starts with a conversation on Messenger – you just don't know... so you have to make sure you're everywhere they might look.

The background of the entire image is a dark, moody photograph of water with ripples. Overlaid on this is a large, semi-transparent gear. In the upper right, a silhouette of a hand is shown turning a smaller gear that meshes with the larger one. The text is contained within a white rectangular box in the center-left.

Digital marketing today: all the pieces

Not that long ago, a website alone was arguably all your business needed to have a “presence” online. Some basic SEO could get you found in search and that was all you needed to worry about.

Today, your digital marketing strategy has to include a plan that will keep your business in front of your customers as they move from shoppers to buyers... and that takes more than just a website.

Today's digital marketing

No matter how or where your customers are searching for you, ultimately it will lead them to the heart of today's digital marketing... your website.

Your business website

In business today, you have to keep moving forward to stay ahead of your competition. Standing still is not an option.

At the center of everything you do is your website. If your business is going to compete online, your website has to effectively position you as the better choice. Everything you do, online and off, leads to your website, so it has to close the deal – it has to turn visitors into customers.

Just as important, your site has to keep up with ever-changing technology and evolving customer behavior. Your competitors will be updating their sites – if you fail to keep up, you will fail to attract new customers.

Is your website
keeping up with your competition?

Is your website tomorrow-proof?

CAN YOU ANSWER “YES” TO THESE 6 QUESTIONS ABOUT YOUR SITE?

1. Is your business ready for voice?

In 2018, an estimated 60 million Americans will do a voice search - like “Hey, Alexa...” or “Ok, Google...” - at least once a month. Do Alexa and Google have the right info for your business? If someone asks about you, or your type of business, will they find you?

2. Is your site truly secure?

Starting in July 2018, Google began to mark unsecure sites (i.e., with http, and not https, in the URL) as “not secure”... letting everyone know your website isn’t a safe place to visit.

3. Is your site really mobile?

A lot of people think they have a mobile-friendly website if they can see a teeny-tiny version of their site on their phone. Today, your site must be truly mobile-friendly – easy to use on any device.

CAN YOU ANSWER “YES” TO THESE 6 QUESTIONS ABOUT YOUR SITE?

4. Does your site load too slowly?

If it takes more than three seconds for your site to load, the average searcher will click away.

1 – 2 – 3... gone.³

5. Is it easy for visitors to contact you?

You have to make it easy for site visitors to contact you, in whatever way they choose – click-to-call, text or form. Give them lots of easy options to help them engage with you.

6. Is it in sync with your other marketing?

To maximize results, your site needs to be connected to everything else you do.

For example, do visitors immediately see positive customer reviews you've received elsewhere on the web? They do when you're your site is in sync with your other digital marketing.

Today's digital marketing

Your website needs to be the heart of your digital marketing, but you need a lot more than just a website to make sure your business is everywhere your customers are searching and surfing online.

Establishing a solid foundation

When someone starts searching for the product or service you provide, your website is rarely, if ever, the first thing they see. Your business appears in dozens of different places – taking control of that information is the first step to building a solid digital foundation. In particular, you need to focus on...

Online Listings

Too many small businesses ignore all the online listings where your business information appears. Your information has to be up-to-date and accurate.

Customer Reviews

You can't just sit back and hope happy customers will post positive reviews. You have to generate good reviews – and do what you can to flip bad ones to good.

Today's digital marketing

Your website may be the heart of your digital marketing, but you need to drive traffic to your site.

Generating leads

The greatest website in the world is useless if no one ever visits it. By using search ads, display ads and social marketing, you can drive targeted, qualified visitors to your site. Then, your website can turn those interested visitors into paying customers.

Search & Display Ads

To succeed online, you have to be where your customers are looking. Search and display ads put you at the top of the search results and on your customers' top sites.

Social Marketing

Social media is more than a great place for cat videos. The average user spends almost an hour a day on Facebook, Instagram and Messenger.⁴ Your business has to be there – and other social media sites – with a page, ads and posts.

Putting the pieces together

If you're like most small business owners, you've expanded your digital marketing over the past few years, adding one piece at a time... probably working with a different vendor for each separate component. Now you're stuck with a disconnected parts instead of a single, synchronized campaign.

Here's why that has to change...

Each step is a touchpoint

Choosing a provider today is a journey with a lot of steps. Take a second and imagine what you do every time you need a product or service – what steps do you take to choose a provider?

You need to be in front of your customer every step of the way– especially when you consider that they could begin the journey at any point. You need to be everywhere and anywhere they might be looking and each touchpoint must be in sync – with a consistent brand and message, pushing them forward to becoming a customer.

The background of the entire image is a close-up, high-contrast photograph of several interlocking metal gears. The gears are dark, possibly black or dark grey, with some highlights showing their metallic texture. They are arranged in a way that creates a sense of depth and mechanical complexity. The lighting is dramatic, with deep shadows and bright highlights on the gear teeth and inner surfaces.
$$1 + 1 + 1 = 10$$

Our real-world results prove that you increase the effectiveness of your digital marketing by increasing the number of touchpoints – simply stated, the opportunities you give a prospect to engage with you, the greater the results.

The proven impact of sync

GETTING YOUR MARKETING IN SYNC DRIVES MORE LEADS

For too long, digital marketing has focused on individual products — a website, search, social, etc. It's become clear that today a disconnected set of products, each from a different provider, is no longer the optimal business model. Today a comprehensive digital marketing solution, designed to work together to deliver the business goals you want to achieve, is the way to maximize ROI.

For example, as you can see below, by synchronizing your digital marketing you can dramatically increase the number of unique visitors to your website.

The added savings of sync

THE ADDED BENEFITS OF HAVING A SINGLE MARKETING PARTNER

Save time

Because many small businesses work with a number of different vendors for their digital marketing, they need to make multiple calls every time they need to make a change.

Save money

By working toward a single goal, you can often spend less on individual programs and still increase the response you get.

Reduce frustration

A single partner helps you avoid all the frustration of “routine” updates – whether you’re updating contact info, like business hours, or updating messaging or imagery.

The man on the right is younger, with dark curly hair and a beard, wearing a blue and white plaid shirt. They are both looking down at a large sheet of paper or a plan on a workbench. The background is a cluttered workshop with shelves and various items.
